"Of course I'm glad to be home but if I had been sure of safe transportation at any time, I would have like to have stayed on the continent and have seen action. It was intensely interesting to be over there and see the mobilization of the different armies," said Miss Lina Willis when interviewed by a Herald reporter.

Miss Willis had quite recovered from the weariness of her ocean trip, arriving in New York late Saturday night and reaching her home in this city Monday evening.

Her anticipation of a peaceful summer enjoyed with intimate friends among the mountains of Switzerland, had been rudely shattered, as had those of all American tourists on the continent. But, despite its horror, there was ample compensation in the thrilling experiences, the graphic scenes of Europe mobilizing its great armies and entering upon the most gigantic war of all times.

Miss Willis was quite enthusiastic over the splendid care that Switzerland took of the Americans. When war was declared the Swiss invited the Italians to go home, and of course the Germans and Austrians left withand English were left, which made

In a very interesting way Miss Willis sketched her trip:

In France it seemed as if they anywhere as to when a government had none, and we were almost at train would go through it was maddening.

"Finally we were advised from England, at the White Star office, that their boats were sailing. You may know we didn't lose any time after that, but got our baggage together and started Tuesday morning. August 18th from Lucerne for Berne. There we had to stop to have our passports signed by the French consul-'ten francs please'-

"We had decided on our own hook to go by way of Neuchatel and Dijon, though most people were leaving Lucerne with the idea of going to Geneva and then back to Paris. along the streets. London is great and has New York beat for work any day in the week. The galleries and other public buildings are all open now, and even the suffragets have laid down their personal grievances for the public defense.

"I do not yet understand the sitnation even so far as it may be done. My sympathy would go out to Switzerland were she forced to fight, through either France or German's fault. Entrance will not be made into their country until there are no Swiss. The mobilization takes practically all of their men, and so the women do the work. Their chief means of livelihood is withdrawn because of cessation of travel, and their food supply will be seriously jeopardized if the situation continues long.'

Miss Willis reports a fine trip over, even with a crowded boat. The ocean route is said to be patrolled by 24 armed cruisers. They made the trip on the St. Louis, of the American line, the Teutonic, of the White Star line, on which they had booked passage, being commandeered for trans-

Washington Entertains Conference

Washington people have this week, enjoyed entertaining the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Conference has brought together and placed Washington in touch with some great men. With a great many intellectnal and moral giants. Men who have consecrated their talents and their energies to the work of making people better, and it's a gigantic, never ending work, a work that will continue as long as men live and the universe endures.

We all feel better and cannot help being better after having seen and heard these great workers in a great cause. The experiencs of the veterans in the services who have risen from the humblest charge to the highest positions in the church cannot fail to compel thoughtful admiration. Men who have been able, efficient and loyal in the service, whose work in the field of human endeavor is nearly ended, and whose life and work will stand as an enduring monument to their memory, join hands with the men in the zenith of their careers in the full He has no hope for conquest; he has enjoyment of their intellectual power and with the recruits just entering the service.

Preachers, like all other professional men in this day and He bears no hatred in his heart age, are driving more and more toward special work. The oldtime general preacher and pastor, whose task covered every part of the field of work, is disappearing and in his stead is coming-has come in fact-the specialist who concentrates his efforts on one single field of activity.

The monster task is being divided and subdivided, all with a view to creating greater efficiency and developing experts more able to deal with and more capable of solving the problems of bettering the social life.

The church has done and is doing a great work for humanity and the human unit in the church of today-the preacheris appreciated more than ever before.

People are beginning to realize what a mammoth task these preachers of the gospel—those who are passing off the stage of action and those who are just entering upon their work-have undertaken. People are realizing now as never before that it requires men in that field of work and that only strong men can succeed, and the type of men who have gathered together in Washington the past week is proof that big men are engaged in church work.

Every day the church is making more practical application of its teachings, and every day it is reaching out into new fields of labor. It is working away from that tendency to aloofness and exclusiveness which for a time threatened to restrict its power for practical good to the minimum and make of it an institution beyond the reach of the masses.

Each day in its activities the great Christian church is joining hands with other great agencies in the work of the betterment of civic agencies for good, and the result of this change has been to strengthen the church and to multiply the benefit to

It is good for any community to be afforded an opportunity to meet these men who make a great church such a practical power for good, and who keep it in touch with man and man's

The Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has always been and always will be, a gathering which Washington will be glad to entertain.

Troops Leave Vera Cruz

The action of this government in withdrawing the troops from Vera Cruz is an evidence of good faith and an expression of confidence in the ability and the integrity of the Constitutionalist party in Mexico to establish a sound government in the interest of the Mexican people.

It is in no sense a recognition of the Carranza government because no such government has yet been established by the Mexican people. That question of recognition is still an open one and the answer depends upon how well the present forces demean themselves and what decree is registered by the Mexican people in an honest and fairly conducted election on the question of form of government and the personnel of the official

The withdrawal of troops from Vera Cruz removes, from the provisional government now in possession at Mexico City, any embarrassment that might attach by reason of the presence of the United States troops on Mexican soil.

The Constitutionalists party under the leadership of Carranza is given free reign to deal with the problems of government in Mexico and no Mexican can charge that that party, in establishing a government, was under coercion by this nation. The men now in charge of affairs in Mexico will thus receive tent of full credit for the good work they do and will alone be censureable for all improper conduct and for any failure to fulfill the promises made to the Mexican people.

Best of all the withdrawal of troops is an evidence which admits of no dispute that this nation in sending troops to Vera of Georgia for the benefit of the non-Cruz was actuated only by the highest and best motives and back of the action was no purpose to secure territory by force and arms which rightfully belonged to the Mexican people. It is open and indisputable evidence of high purpose and honest fulfillment of promise that should serve a purpose with the Carranza party and be a valuable guide to its future actions. Read the Classified Columns.

On the west of the battle line, the English and French have forced the army of Von Kluck to give way in places. The German center, now very powerful, was thrown back three times in its attempt to recapture Rheims and break the French center. It is a combat of artillery. Day and night thousands of German cannon hammer at the allies, while every gun that the French and English can Sheer exhaustion and frightful bring to bear is directed toward atlosses have checked assaults and tempting to silence these destructive counter assaults all along the battle guns. In Iulis of artillery fighting the line from north of Noyon to Etain, allies have assaulted the German The armies of Germans and allies, positions and have been able here after incessant fighting for six days and there to gain ground, but only

There has been desperate fighting to the north of Chalons, where the Germans are strongly intrenched. At past twenty-four hours rests with the that point, where the German lines loop to the south, the allies endeavored unsuccessfully to storm the German position. The German artillery was operated from double lines of embankments twenty rods apart, while the German infantry was protected by trenches three and four feet

Th German line now forms an immense obtuse angle, the right point north of Noyon, the middle point just north of Chalons and the left point at Montfaucon. In spite of the daily assaults upon their positions, they have been able to raise strong entrenchments along most of this line where they were not protected by the topography of the country.

Montfaucon, which is northwest of Verdun, is where Crown Prince Frederick William is making his stand. His positon may be the key to the battle. If, as is the purpose of the allies, he can be cut off from supporting armies and hurled toward Luxemburg, short work would be made of the German armies to the west, in the opinion of French military critics.

The German official reports are al most identical with those of the al lies. They say no decision yet has been reached, but that the allies power of resistance is weakening; that a French attempt to break their right has failed; that in the center the Germans are gaining ground slowly, and that sallies from Verdun have been repulsed.

He responded by rendering the beautiful selection, "Jesus Is So Dear

Dr. Freeman then read from Isiah, 5th chapter, and addressed the Conference. His remarks were greatly helpful to all the Conference. He pointed out that the preacher to be successful must see a vision.

At 9 o'clock promptly Bishop Thirkield took the chair and announced the 196th hymn, "Breathe On Me, Oh | Breath of God."

The journal of the third day was then read. Dr. Norcross objected to the minutes reading, "The Bishop was requested to send him to the Methodist Home for the Aged."

Dr. Herbert Welch, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, was introduced and addressed the Conference. He made the statement that $1,000,-000 was expected to be raised in the next five years when the diamond jubilee will be celebrated in 1919.

Dr. R. F. Bishop presented Dr. A. M. Mann with a purse. The amount was not stated. Dr. Mann responded in a fitting manner.

When Death Fell Out of The Sky Upon Antwerp; One of the Damaged Buildings Due to Airship Bomb

"Infamous warfare" is the way most people regard the attacks in the air at night upon Antwerp, Belgium, and upon Paris. Bombs dropped from a Zeppelin airship over Antwerp ruined many buildings and cost several lives, all noncombatants and innocent women and children. The Germans regretted the damage and said the combs had not been thrown carefully enough, the intention being to have damaged the army headquarters. The picture shows one of the ruined buildings.

among German states must be destroyed: German militarism must be crushed: complete satisfaction must be given to England, France and Belgium: Poland must be reunited: Russian interests and the interests of the Slav peoples must be safeguarded.

received from Calcutta by a Boston importing house confirms the Tokio report of the sinking of five British steamships by the German cruiser Emden off the coast of India. The dispatches say that the vessels, which are sunk in the bay of Bengal, are reported to be the Diplomat, the Lovah, the Indus, the Killin and the Trabboch. The dispatch further says that all sailings from Calcutta have been prohibited for the present.

William Jones of Birmingham, Ala., engineer of the wrecked train, who lost his life, is said to have been given the "clear" signal at the last automatic switch post before the Klondyke switch, where the wreck occurred. Supporters of the wrecker theory think some one tampered with the switch in the brief interval after the train passed the block and before it struck the switch. It also is said that the switch was thrown against the train, that the switch light was out and that the oil tank was empty.

being fought along the San river, southwest of Przemysl and fifty miles west of Lemberg.

Upon the outcome of this battle depends Russia's ability to carry the war into Silesia. A great Russian army under the victorious generals, bulls, $5@7 75; stockers and feeders, $6 25 Ruzsky and Broussiloff, are endeavoring to complete earlier triumphs and Dankl and the Austrian crown prince.

> The Austrians, by one of the most desperate retreats in history, have been able to preserve the remains of their forces battered at Lemberg and do, George." Tomaszow, and, concentrated along the San, are making a determined stand against the Russians.

Their tactics are being directed by strategists of the German general staff hurriedly sent to Galicia after most pressing appeals from Vienna. The lines of defense around Przemysl have been arranged by the Germans, who have assumed responsibility for the Austrian defense. There is news that several German army corps have been united with the Austrian armies and that the situation from the German-Austrian standpoint is more hopeful.

Refreating from the Lemberg district, Generals Von Auffenberg and Dankl lost thousands of prisoners and were obliged to abandon many batteries. They succeeded, however, in their main purpose, which was to escape the Russian trap designed to encompass them in the marshes of the San and Vistula and were able to effect a junction to the south and west of Przemysl.

Charges Repulsed.

With the dashing tactics hitherto successful, General Ruzsky attempted to smash through a fortified line extending from Przemysl to Jaroslaw on i the north. Russian army corps were hurled against these fortifications, but were unable to break through in time to cut off the retreat of the Austrian field armies. General Ruzsky's army pierced the outer detenses of Przemysl, but was obliged to fall back before the siege guns of the Przemysl fortress. Now the Russians have left a force to invest Przemysł and have swung their main armies to the south and west of Przemysl in an attempt to crush the reunited Austrians.

The Austrian left is commanded by General Dankl, assisted by the Archduke Francis Frederick. His lines spread from the Vistula river, near the Russian frontier, to Jaroslaw, where the central army. line of retreat has been secured. From Vienna comes the assertion that the situation is critical, but that the Austrian armies have been heavily reinforced and are now maintaining a strong defensive. Confidence is expressed that Von Auffenberg and Dankl will be able to delay the Russian advance until the Germans are able to divert huge reinforcements to the help of Austria.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Marasmus. Marasmus is a wasting disease that occurs in babies, generally in their first year. Without any discoverable cause a child with marasmus not only fails to gain, but begins to lose weight slowly, but steadily. At the same time the bones continue to grow, and the teeth come at the usual time. The poor child takes on a distressing appearance; it becomes almost a living skelton, although sometimes the abdomen is dis-

The child is always hungry because it is starving. It cannot assimilate any food and is as hungry a few minutes after eating as it was before. It cries most of the time, with a fretful, whining cry. Sometimes a very small baby will sleep incessantly instead of crying. Each case of marasmus must be carefully studied, for treatment that cures one child quickly often has no effect on another. Parents should seek the best of medical advice. Apart from its feeding, the marasmic child needs the greatest care. Owing to its extreme emaciation, bedsores often form; consequently the baby's position should be changed frequently, and it should be kept perfeetly clean. The child must be kept warm, but it also needs a great deal of fresh air both day and night, and it is a good plan to keep it in the open air all the time and let it sleep on a balcony if possible. Be careful to avoid chilling the little body.

"Of course I'm glad to be home, but if I had been sure of safe transportation at any time, I would have like to have stayed on the continent and have seen action. It was intensely interesting to be over there and see the mobilization of the different armies," said Miss Lina Willis when interviewed by a Herald reporter.

Miss Willis had quite recovered from the weariness of her ocean trip, arriving in New York late Saturday night and reaching her home in this city Monday evening.

Her anticipation of a peaceful summer enjoyed with intimate friends among the mountains of Switzerland, had been rudely shattered, as had those of all American tourists on the continent. But, despite its horror, there was ample compensation in the thrilling experiences, the graphic scenes of Europe mobilizing its great armies and entering upon the most gigantic war of all times.

Miss Willis was quite enthusiastic over the splendid care that Switzerland took of the Americans. When war was declared the Swiss invited the Italians to go home, and of course out invitation, so only the Americans farther north, and so nearer the and English were left, which made fighting line. Washington Entertains Conference

Washington people have this week, enjoyed entertaining the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Conference has brought together and placed Washington in touch with some great men. With a great many intellectual and moral giants. Men who have consecrated their talents and their energies to the work of making people better, and it' a gigantic, never ending work, a work that will continue as long as men live and the universe endures.

We all feel better and cannot help being better after having seen and heard these great workers in a great cause. The experiencs of the veterans in the services who have risen from the humblest charge to the highest positions in the church cannot fail to compel thoughtful admiration. Men who have been able, efficient and loyal in the service, whose work in the field of human endeavor is nearly ended, and whose life and work will stand as an enduring monument to their memory, join hands with the men in the zenith of their careers in the full He has no hope for conquest; he has enjoyment of their intellectual power and with the recruits just entering the service.

Preachers, like all other professional men in this day and age, are driving more and more toward special work. The oldtime general preacher and pastor, whose task covered every Unlearned he in strategy, or states part of the field of work, is disappearing and in his stead is coming-has come in fact-the specialist who concentrates his efforts on one single field of activity.

The monster task is being divided and subdivided, all with a view to creating greater efficiency and developing experts more able to deal with and more capable of solving the problems of bettering the social life.

The church has done and is doing a great work for humanity and the human unit in the church of today—the preacher is appreciated more than ever before.

People are beginning to realize what a mammoth task these preachers of the gospel—those who are passing off the stage of But when he sees upon the hills the action and those who are just entering upon their work-have undertaken. People are realizing now as never before that it requires men in that field of work and that only strong men can succeed, and the type of men who have gathered together in Washington the past week is proof that big men are engaged in church work

Every day the church is making more practical application of its teachings, and every day it is reaching out into new fields of labor. It is working away from that tendency to aloofness and exclusiveness which for a time threatened to restrict its power for practical good to the minimum and make of it an institution beyond the reach of the masses.

Each day in its activities the great Christian church is joining hands with other great agencies in the work of the betterment of civic agencies for good, and the result of this change has been to strengthen the church and to multiply the benefit to

It is good for any community to be afforded an opportunity to meet these men who make a great church such a practical power for good, and who keep it in touch with man and man's affairs.

The Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has always been and always will be, a gathering which Washington will be glad to entertain.

Iroops Leave Vera Cruz

The action of this government in withdrawing the troops from Vera Cruz is an evidence of good faith and an expression of confidence in the ability and the integrity of the Constitutionalist party in Mexico to establish a sound government in the interest of the Mexican people.

It is in no sense a recognition of the Carranza government because no such government has yet been established by the Mexican people. That question of recognition is still an open of one and the answer depends upon how well the present forces demean themselves and what decree is registered by the Mexican people in an honest and fairly conducted election on the question of form of government and the personnel of the official

The German artilagainst the French center.

English and French have forced the army of Von Kluck to give way in places. The German center, now very powerful, was thrown back three times in its attempt to recapture Rheims and break the French center. On the east of the main line of battle, at Montfaucon, the Germans are standing rigidly

The French people, availing with calmness a decisive outcome, accept the moderate statement of the government that the situation of the allies is favorable.

Every fragment of news from the front makes it positive that the allies are facing a more difficult situation than that which existed along the Marne. The Germans have been heavily reinforced. They are strongly intrenched along a vast battle line. Their great resources of artillery are operated, in many places, from wooded heights and the location of batteries has been shrewdly concealed. There is every indication that the armies of the kaiser are ready ence more to put up a powerful of fensive movement and a disaster in any part of the allies' line, particularly in the center, would permit the gray wave to roll southward.

The fourth day's work of the Ohio M. E. Conference began a little after of fifty men sounded majestic. Many people walking and in vehicles stopped and listened. The crowd marched in the church and at 8:30 Dr. Luman asked Rev. M. B. Osborne to tion was accepted. sing. He responded by rendering the beautiful selection, "Jesus Is So Dear to Me".

Dr. Freeman then read from Isiah, 5th chapter, and addressed the Conference. His remarks were greatly helpful to all the Conference. He pointed out that the preacher to be successful must see a vision.

At 9 o'clock promptly Bishop Thirkield took the chair and announced the 196th hymn, "Breathe On Me, Oh Breath of God."

The journal of the third day was then read. Dr. Norcross objected to the minutes reading, "The Bishop was requested to send him to the Methodist Home for the Aged."

Dr. Herbert Welch, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, was introduced and addressed the Conference. He made the statement that $1,000,-000 was expected to be raised in the next five years when the diamond jubilee will be celebrated in 1919.

Dr. R. F. Bishop presented Dr. A. M. Mann with a purse. The amount was not stated. Dr. Mann responded in a fitting manner.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. Search is being made for the train wreckers believed to have caused the death of ten persons and the injury of thirty others by derailing Queen and Crescent train No. 2 near Livingston, Ala. Bloodhounds taken to the scene of the tragedy failed to pick up a trail.

Some of the injured, taken to Meridian, Miss., hospitals, are in a serious condition and the death toll of the wreck may be increased.

William Jones of Birmingham, Ala. engineer of the wrecked train, who lost his life, is said to have been given the "clear" signal at the last automatic switch post before the Klondyke switch, where the wreck occurred. Supporters of the wrecker theory think some one tampered with the switch in the brief interval after the train passed the block and before it struck the switch. It also is said that the switch was thrown against the train, that the switch light was out and that the oil tank was empty. Boost Washington-Buy At Home

London, Sept. 19.-A great battle is being fought along the San river, southwest of Przemysl and fifty miles west of Lemberg.

Upon the outcome of this battle depends Russia's ability to carry the war into Silesia. A great Russian army under the victorious generals, Ruzsky and Broussiloff, are endeavor- started." ing to complete earlier triumphs against Generals Von Auffenberg was your business?" and Dankl and the Austrian crown prince.

The Austrians, by one of the most desperate retreats in history, have been able to preserve the remains of their forces battered at Lemberg and do, George." Tomaszow, and, concentrated along the San, are making a determined stand against the Russians. spaniel."-Baltimore American.

Their tactics are being directed by strategists of the German general staff hurriedly sent to Galicia after most pressing appeals from Vienna. The lines of defense around Przemysl have been arranged by the Germans, who have assumed responsibility for the Austrian defense. There is news that several German army corps have been united with the Austrian armies and that the situation from the German-Austrian standpoint is more hopeful.

Retreating from the Lemberg district, Generals Von Auffenberg and Dankl lost thousands of prisoners and were obliged to abandon many batteries. They succeeded, however, in their main purpose, which was to escape the Russian trap designed to encompass them in the marshes of the San and Vistula and were able to effect a junction to the south and west of Przemysl. Charges Repulsed.

With the dashing tactics hitherto successful, General Ruzsky attempted to smash through a fortified line extending from Przemysl to Jaroslaw on the north. Russian army corps were hurled against these fortifications, but were unable to break through in time to cut off the retreat of the Austrian field armies. General Ruzsky's army pierced the outer detenses of Przemysl, but was obliged | • to fall back before the siege guns of the Przemysl fortress. Now the Russians have left a force to invest Przemysl and have swung their main armies to the south and west of Przemysl in an attempt to crush the reunited Austrians.

The Austrian left is commanded by General Dankl, assisted by the Archduke Francis Frederick. His lines spread from the Vistula river, near the Russian frontier, to Jaroslaw, to avoid chilling the little body. where the central army, Von Auffen- bowever. line of retreat has been secured. From Vienna comes the assertion that the situation is critical, but that the Austrian armies have been heavily reinforced and are now maintaining a strong defensive. Confidence is expressed that Von Auffenberg and Dankl will be able to delay the Russian advance until the Germans are able to divert huge reinforcements to the help of Austria.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Marasmus is a wasting disease that occurs in babies, generally in their first year. Without any discoverable cause a child with marasmus not only fails to gain, but begins to lose weight slowly. but steadily. At the same time the bones continue to grow, and the teeth come at the usual time. The poor child takes on a distressing appearance; it becomes almost a living skelton, although sometimes the abdomen is distended.

The child is always hungry because it is starving. It cannot assimilate any food and is as hungry a few minutes after eating as it was before. It cries most of the time, with a fretful, whining cry. Sometimes a very small baby will sleep incessantly instead of crying. Each case of marasmus must be carefully studied, for treatment that cures one child quickly often has no effert on another. Parents should seek the best of medical advice. Apart from its feeding, the marasmic child needs the greatest care. Owing to its extreme emaciation, bedsores often form; consequently the baby's position should be changed frequently, and it should be kept perfeetly clean. The child must be kept warm, but it also needs a great deal of fresh air both day and night, and it is a good plan to keep it in the open air all the time and let it sleep on a balcony if possible Be careful it is helpful to rub warmed olive oil gently into the skin all over
